

I can identify main ideas drawn from more than one paragraph and summarise these.

How is Joe's world different to Lucy's?

Joe's World

Joe's family have a car.
He eats cornflakes.
His father no longer lives with him.
There are housing estates and a museum.
He wears a St. Christopher around his neck.
He has a modern-day bathroom.
There was a very old dolphin mosaic on the museum floor.
He wears a t-shirt and shorts.
He has a different first name to his sibling.
He can go anywhere in his house.
His family does their own cleaning and cooking.
They speak English.
They have clocks and watches.
They have a kitchen table.

Lucy's World

Lucy's family travel by horse.
They eat quails' eggs, snails, spicy chicken and poached fish.
Her father owns a palace, and they are all living together there.
The people live in a Palace.
She wears a bulla on a thong around her neck.
They share Roman baths.
The same floor in the Palace was black and white.
She wears a long, pale dress and sandals, whilst Joe wears a tunic.
She shares the first part of her name with her siblings.
The formal garden is only for her parents and important visitors.
Her family has slaves.
They speak Latin.
They tell the time using a sundial.
They have low tables for normal meals but other tables for feasts.